

University of California, Santa Barbara
Program Learning Outcomes

PhD in East Asian Languages and Cultural Studies

Students graduating with a PhD in East Asian Languages and Cultural Studies should be able to:

Core Knowledge

---

- Demonstrate proficiency in Chinese or Japanese.
- Demonstrate general knowledge of East Asian cultures.
- Demonstrate specialized knowledge of bibliographical, methodological, and theoretical issues in a sub-field of East Asian studies, including but not limited to history, literature, religious studies, anthropology, linguistics and the arts, as well as social and cultural anthropology and sociology.

Research Methods and Analysis

---

- Target and conduct research in three areas of specialization in the academic study of East Asia.
- Conduct original research using sources in Chinese, or Japanese.
- Master a range of methodological and theoretical issues in the scholar's sub-field.

Pedagogy

---

- Conduct all aspects of instruction, including leading discussion, designing various forms of assignments, and grading them.
- Communicate effectively in pedagogical settings in both lecture and discussion formats.
- Design high-quality undergraduate and graduate courses in East Asian studies.
- Assess students effectively, including developing and using appropriate measures and rubrics.

Scholarly Communication

---

- Review and cogently synthesize relevant literature.
- Structure a coherent academic argument that rigorously presents and evaluates evidence to support claims.
- Write in a level and style of English consistent with that found in leading academic journals.
- Follow proper styles of scholarly documentation in Chinese and Japanese studies.
- Make clear and cogent oral presentations on academic occasions, such as conferences and classrooms.

Continued on Page 2

University of California, Santa Barbara
Program Learning Outcomes, continued

Professionalism

---

- Produce competitive paper proposals for conference venues for networking and communicating with other professionals in their fields.
- Prepare manuscripts that meet the standards of specific academic journals and respond appropriately to recommendations for revision.
- Select appropriate fellowship or grant opportunities and prepare competitive proposals for them.
- Make effective contributions to university, community, and professional service that demands research and expertise in East Asian studies.